DEBATE-MARKET SYSTEM vs ONLINE SHOPPING: THE FUTURE RETAIL

DATE : 24.12.2020

ACTIVITY : DEBATE

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Student 1:

Online shopping is the future of retail. It offers convenience, flexibility, and a wider range of products. With the rise of e-commerce, consumers can shop from anywhere, at any time.

Student 2:

Moreover, online shopping reduces the need for physical infrastructure, allowing businesses to save on costs and pass the savings on to consumers. It also enables businesses to reach a global audience.

Negative Side (In Favor of Market System)

Student 3:

The market system is still the backbone of retail. It provides a tactile experience, allowing consumers to touch, feel, and try products before purchasing. Human interaction and customer service are also essential aspects of the market system.

Student4:

Furthermore, the market system promotes local economic growth, supports small businesses, and fosters community development. It also allows for impulse purchases and discoveries.

Conclusion

Both sides have presented compelling arguments. Ultimately, the future of retail will likely be a blend of online and offline shopping experiences, with each offering unique benefits and advantages.

PUBLIC FINANCE: CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES

DATE : 03.03.2020

ACTIVITY : GROUP DISCUSSION

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Student 1:

I think one of the biggest challenges in public finance is the issue of fiscal deficits. Many governments struggle to balance their budgets, which can lead to debt accumulation and reduced fiscal space.

Student 2:

That's true, Rohan. But another challenge is the inefficient tax system. In many countries, tax evasion is a major problem, which reduces government revenue and increases inequality.

Student 3:

I agree with both of you. But we also need to consider the impact of corruption on public finance. Corruption can lead to misallocation of resources, reduced public trust, and decreased economic growth.

Student 4:

What about the opportunities in public finance? I think digitalization can play a huge role in improving tax compliance, reducing corruption, and increasing transparency.
